office of the Librarian of Congress, at Washington.

THE latest authentic information which could be obtained respecting Newspapers will be found in this, the Nineteenth Annual Edition of the American Newspaper Directory. It has been the sustained and well defined purpose of the Publishers to make the Directory as complete and accurate as is possible in a work of this character, without regard to the labor and expense necessary to produce such a result.

Numerous changes occur every year, every month, in fact each day, and to correctly chronicle all of these, to obtain copies and minutely describe all new publications; and more difficult still to eliminate such as have died; to supply and correct the description of towns which constitutes the Gazetteer matter, found to be so important a feature in this publication, and to obtain all accessible information respecting circulations of papers, requires the constant attention of the Editor of the Directory. Upon these subjects he is at all times glad to receive information which will enable him to detect and correct errors of judgment or of fact.

This edition shows the number of papers published in the United States to be 14,706; an increase of 546 during the past year. The astonishing increase in the number of Newspapers during the past seventeen years is exhibited below:

1872.....	6,519.
1873.....	6,875.
1874.....	7,339.
1875.....	7,870.
1876.....	8,129.
1877.....	7,958.
1878.....	8,275.
1879.....	8,703.
1880.....	9,723.
1881.....	10,267.
1882.....	10,611.
1883.....	11,196.
1884.....	12,671.
1885.....	13,494.
1886.....	14,160.
1887.....	14,706.

The daily publications show an increase this year of 95; the preceding year it was 33; the weeklies have grown from 10,685 to 11,116, and there are 52 more monthlies; in the edition for 1886 the increase in monthlies recorded was but one.

Pennsylvania shows the greatest increase in dailies, 17; California coming next with 13. Kansas leads in growth of weeklies, having 81 more than last year ; Nebraska coming next with 55. The most prominent increase in monthlies is in New York, where they have grown from 312 to 354.

Seven States show a decrease, four of them belong to the South and two to New England. New Hampshire and Virginia have each six papers less than one year ago and Georgia five less.

The New England States exhibit a net increase of 13 ; Middle States 67 ; Southern States 91 and Western States 330 ; the Territories 40 and the District of Columbia 6. It will be noticed that the growth in numbers in the State of Kansas has been about equal to the increase in all of the Southern States combined ; Kansas, with Nebraska, furnishing over one-fourth of the total increase for the year.

Nebraska has the largest number of papers in proportion to its population, the ratio being 1 to every 1,025 persons ; South Carolina has the smallest, 1 to every 10,370. Of the Territories Dakota has 1 paper for every 412 persons, while Utah, which has a population 14,000 greater, has but 28 papers or one for every 5,240. The ratio in New York is 1 to 3,200 ; in Massachusetts 1 to 3,000 and in Pennsylvania 1 to 3,750. The vicissitudes of the press are illustrated by the ratio of changes in certain States. Last year Illinois and Iowa exhibited an increase of 48 and 44 respectively, while Indiana had increased but 5. This year Illinois shows an increase of 15, Iowa remains the same as last year and Indiana has increased 19. Last year the increase in New York was 30, this year it is but 14. Pennsylvania, according to the last Directory, had three dailies less than in the preceding edition, this year it has 17 more.

The Class publications have been rearranged with a view to greater convenience in referring to them.

It has been the object of the publishers to so restrict the number of advertisements in this edition as to relieve the book of a portion of its bulkiness and give additional value and prominence to those which have been inserted. Papers which do not claim some special merit of value to advertisers have not been applied to for advertisements, and many orders have been declined for reasons which seem to make such a course the wisest to pursue.

Warmest thanks are due to the many publishers of leading journals who, by a generous patronage, have made it possible to issue so complete a compendium of the periodical press of America.

NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING.

AN EXPLANATION OF THE PURPOSES AND METHODS OF
GEO. P. ROWELL & CO'S NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING BUREAU.

In 1865 we organized a Bureau for the reception and forwarding of advertisements for all Newspapers, and for more than twenty years have conducted a general Newspaper Advertising business.

Ten years ago Messrs. Geo. P. Rowell & Co. established their Advertising Agency in New York City. Five years ago they absorbed the business conducted by Mr. John Hooper, who was the first to go into this kind of enterprise. Now they have the satisfaction of controlling the most extensive and complete advertising connection which has ever been secured, and one which would be hardly possible in any other country but this. They have succeeded in working down a complex business into so thoroughly a systematic method that no change in the newspaper system of America can escape notice, while the widest information upon all topics interesting to advertisers is placed readily at the disposal of the public.—Times (New York), June 14th, 1875.

We undertake to represent American periodical publications: the daily and other Newspapers of the city of New York, and all other American cities; the Religious, Agricultural and other Newspapers published in the interests of the various sects, classes, trades or interests; and also the best county journals of local circulation and influence.

We receive regularly and keep on file nearly all Newspapers issued daily, weekly, monthly, or other, throughout the land.

We confine our transactions to Newspapers and Magazines [periodicals], and do not undertake the management of any advertising in books, or by means of signboards, posters, etc.

We are in direct correspondence with publishers of all the leading and influential Newspapers.

We have an established credit with them, so that there is no delay on that score about the insertion of an advertisement which has been ordered by us. This is a matter of prime importance to our customers.

We have a thoroughly perfected system, and the best facilities for conducting the necessary negotiations, and watching the fulfillment of advertising contracts.

We include among our occasional patrons fully three-fifths of all who advertise in journals outside of the immediate neighborhoods where they reside and transact business.

The office, outfit, and requisite plant for a first-class agency in New York cost at least $100,000 investment, and a weekly pay-roll of $1,000. There is no doubt in our mind, after forty years' experience, that such an agency as that of Geo. P. Rowell & Co. is better for the advertiser and better for the newspaper than any special, exclusive agency. The newspapers combine in what is termed an associated press, by which nine-tenths of the news is gathered. Why should they not also have their advertising gathered by single large agencies in New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago, etc.? Such co-operation reduces the expense. It does the work for the advertiser more satisfactorily and cheaply, while at the same time it gives the publisher greater net results.—Evening Wisconsin (Milwaukee, Wis.), Dec. 19th, 1885.

Whose Patronage is Sought.

We seek the patronage of business men, of merchants, publishers and manufacturers, the skilled, the thrifty, the inventive, the earnest in every pursuit, confident that by our perfected facilities we can procure better work for less money than it is possible for private parties to do.

Who Need our Services.

Newspapers announce their prospectuses and desirable premiums. Steamships advertise excursions or reduced fares. Summer Resorts issue announcements to attract visitors. Educational institutions seek pupils. Business men want skilled workmen or assistants. Clerks and others desire situations. Brothers, husbands and sons disappear, and must be advertised for in the cities where they were last heard of. New corporations seek stockholders who have money to invest.

Those who require our services may be found in every business : Proprietors of patent medicines ; persons who have books, patent-rights or other articles to sell through canvassers, peddlers, or otherwise ; manufacturers who wish to introduce or increase the sale of their products ; States or Railroad Companies wishing to attract settlers to desirable but unoccupied lands ; Bankers who would sell investment securities.

A man wishing to sell a farm, factory or business interest, may believe that a customer would more likely be found in Boston, Washington or San Francisco, than in other cities, but not know the names of the papers most likely to reach a possible buyer in those places or the cost of inserting his announcement. This information it is our province to furnish.

Through the entire round of affairs advertising has to be brought into frequent or occasional requisition. It often happens that a man who never expended a dollar for this purpose, suddenly finds himself obliged to make a considerable outlay without time for deliberation, or the possession of any knowledge of the methods to be employed. To persons of this class the benefit to be derived from such an office as we conduct is very apparent.

It is conducted upon the principles which are believed to be the right ones for securing best and most satisfactory results.

The advertiser of greatest experience cannot have the same familiarity with newspaper values and rates, which our extensive dealings secures to us, kept constantly in communication as we are with publishers of every class.

To any one who thinks ; the advantages of such an institution to advertisers in a small or large way is obvious. It would be impossible for small firms, enterprising though they may be, to attempt without great cost, to obtain such verified information as such an agency can furnish. What the newspaper requires is security of payment. What the advertiser desires is the certainty of fidelity to his interests, and assurances that the representations as to character, circulation and availability of the mediums which he employs are to be depended upon. No agency can have a permanent and profitable existence lacking these elements. There is a perfect system in the management of the business of Geo. P. Rowell & Co., and the merchant who intrusts his advertising to this firm may expect to have it attended to with fidelity and in the most accurate manner. They have won the respect and confidence of all with whom they do business, and every succeeding year adds hosts of names to their list of customers.—Morning News (Wilmington, Del.), Feb. 5th, 1886.

Comparative Values of Newspapers.

To be able to designate the political tendencies, be informed concerning the growing or declining popularity of particular journals, to know what statements purporting to emanate from the publishers' office can be relied upon ; and which must be discredited ; to know where most service can be obtained for the money ; what prices are high, and what low ; all come within the province of the Advertising Bureau. Its success will largely depend upon the prompt accuracy with which it imparts to its patrons the desired information on these and kindred points.

A thorough advertising agency, an honest advertising agency and a valuable advertising agency mean much more than might at first appear. The advertiser wants to know at what points his particular commodity will be likely to be most eagerly sought, from what section he may look for the largest returns, and what particular journals may reach in those sections such people as will be most likely to patronize the interests which he has in hand. The journals are, of course, anxious to be assured of the certainty of payment and the continuation of patronage. These two interests are those which a really intelligent advertising agency desires to serve, and to thoroughly serve, which is its only hope of success. Nobody understood this better than did Messrs. Geo. P. Rowell & Co. They saw in the first place that honesty—to place the matter on no higher plane—was the best policy; that to serve the system in which they believed was to serve each of these interests alike with fidelity and thoroughness.—Record (Philadelphia, Pa.), Dec. 2nd, 1885.

The proprietor of a Newspaper, the clerk in his employ, the special canvasser who represents him, is never the person to whom an advertiser should apply for information about the best medium for spreading abroad his announcements. From the nature of the case there is but one reply to be expected from them, namely: "ADVERTISE IN 'OUR' PAPER." They do not possess, and it is not their business to possess, the information about a competing journal which may make it the more economical medium through which the advertiser may accomplish the purpose he has in view.

What We Do.

We undertake to have at hand a schedule of the rates for advertising adopted by the publishers of every newspaper of consequence; to be able to quote figures to an advertiser who wishes to insert an advertisement in one paper or several; and to procure the prompt insertion of the advertisement without any extra charge for the service rendered by us:—which service consists of quoting the price, printing or writing as many duplicates of the advertisement as may be required to furnish one for each paper, forwarding the copy for insertion (at our own expense for postage or messenger service), examining the papers to see that the advertisement appears at the time and in the manner that it ought to, checking each issue of the advertisement in each paper on checking cards specially prepared for the purpose, and which are at all times subject to the inspection of the advertiser, and marking plainly in each paper the advertisement as it appears, so that should the advertiser come (or send) for the purpose of having the files examined (to see that the service for which his money pays has been actually rendered) the eye may promptly perceive his announcement, without searching through a page or the whole paper.

I have within the past few days taken a little turn among well-known NEWSPAPER MANAGERS, so as to get New Yorkers' criticisms on this firm and their methods. All speak well of them, and the only criticism that is ever made is that they know too well every point that is ever yielded to any advertiser, and insist upon getting it for their customers. Their knowledge of our own affairs is a help to us, for their orders come to us so specific, their copy is so clearly put, in type or manuscript, their wants so distinctly expressed, that there seldom arises a question about their advertisements, as is too often the case with other patrons. And their system of payments, too, is such that every New York publisher honors their orders as quickly as those of any house. The publishers here are also glad to do business with them from the fact that no time is lost in the doing of the business. They do not go to the offices to quibble about rates, position, types, and a thousand other things that suggest themselves to the novice or occasional advertiser. They know already the possibilities, and they are, with all their shrewdness and experience, very reasonable men. So it is that business coming from them is treated as favorably as it is possible from any one. They possess every facility now obtainable for carrying out any advertiser's plan with the utmost rapidity, greatest care, the least labor to the best advantage, and at the minimum of cost.—Moses King's Sketch in Bradstreet's (New York City), April 3rd, 1886.

If errors or omissions occur, it is our duty to notify publishers, at our own expense for labor, postage or messenger, and to see to it that the publisher of the paper actually does the specified service for which the advertiser contracted.

Thousands of Advertising Patrons.

We have on our ledgers the names of more than five thousand advertisers, who are now doing or have recently done business with American Newspapers, through our office. Some have entrusted their orders to us constantly for twenty years. For one we have placed advertising amounting to nearly a million dollars, and we count several patrons from whom our orders have amounted to more than a quarter of a million of dollars individually.

The revolution that Rowell & Co. brought about, a score of years ago, created the advertising agency as now conducted. They, very early in their career, established an unquestioned credit, and many an outside publisher was better pleased to get an order from this firm at a low rate than from other firms at a much higher one. They do not try to allure any one into any line of advertising. They will, however, furnish him by all odds the most reliable data on which to base his decision. They will not try to get a man to spend money, but will see that he gets the full value of any money he wishes to spend. Only in such an office, backed up with such a long-continued and well-developed organization, can the true and unprejudiced information be ascertained. The records of the firm will show that it holds the patronage of its customers as long and as satisfactorily as does almost any firm in any branch of business. Concerns who were patrons twenty years ago, are patrons to-day. It is the accumulation of old customers, not the getting of transient or new customers, that would warrant a concern like this to go systematically to work to earn the good-will of the newspaper world.—Bradstreet's (New York City), April 3rd, 1886.

There is no advertiser upon the transaction of whose business we cannot make a profit, and, at the same time, save to him a percentage of the present cost, even though he count as nothing the postage, stationery and other expenses incidental to correspondence and watching the conduct of the business on his own account.

We secure the insertion of any advertisement at as low a rate as would be accorded to the advertiser should he apply to the journals direct; and are allowed an agent's commission by the publisher, to remunerate us for the time and expense required in transacting the business.

Neither the newspaper nor the advertising patrons suffer at their hands. They do what they agree to do, and do it so well and thoroughly that there is no cause of complaint. The Hawk-Eye, from its long experience with Rowell & Co., most heartily commends their agency to the advertising public. It does not need to commend them to the newspaper fraternity, as every publisher knows by personal experience the enviable reputation and straightforward business methods of that firm.—Hawk-Eye (Burlington, Iowa), Sept. 12th, 1886.

Small Advertisers.

We have a great number of customers who pay us occasional sums ranging from ten dollars to fifty, and these patrons are valued. What they do is sufficient to make them familiar with our methods; and there is a moderate profit accruing from the transaction of such business as they bring. If each occasional advertiser is favorably impressed, the words of commendation he lets fall direct other persons to our office who otherwise might never have heard of us; and from among these, as time passes on, large and bold advertisers develop. Every successful enterprise has a small beginning.

Estimates and Proofs Exhibited.

For any responsible Advertiser making application in good faith, we prepare a written estimate showing the approximate cost of any proposed advertising.

Messrs. Rowell & Co. have already displayed much enterprise in affording their patrons and the advertising public generally all information possible regarding newspapers, and in placing at their disposal all the facilities which a long and honorable dealing with the papers of this country has enabled that popular and reputable firm to acquire.—Daily Northwestern (Oshkosh, Wis.), Jan. 6th, 1887.

If desired we prepare and exhibit printed proofs of the proposed advertisement.

Our customers at all times, within three months from date of publication, have access to complete files of the Newspapers in which their advertisements are inserted.

Tell What You Want.

Before the wants of an advertiser can be properly attended to it is necessary for him to make known the result which he wishes to accomplish. Nothing so well tells the object which he has in mind as a copy of the advertisement he purposes using.

Many papers have special rates for certain classes of advertisements. Some insert no medical advertisements; others exclude announcements which leave the reader in doubt concerning the object or business of the advertiser; many decline to place before their readers the prospectuses of other Newspapers; and still others exclude pictures or large display type. For these and other reasons it is of importance to know in advance not only what the business is for which we are to quote prices for advertising, but also the style of display of the advertisement which is to be used.

The science of writing advertisements consists mainly in saying in a few plain words exactly what it is desired to say—precisely as it would be written in a letter or told to an acquaintance.

When an advertiser whose mercantile rating is sufficiently high to make his credit good for his wants sends a copy of his advertisement to the Advertising Bureau, with instructions to insert it in certain papers which he names (having stated whether daily or weekly editions are intended and named the time he wishes it to appear), and requests that bill for same be sent in due time, the work of the Advertising Bureau is plain, there is no opportunity for a misunderstanding: the work is done quickly and well, and without friction.

But usually the advertiser wants to know what the advertising he intends doing will cost, and to tell this in advance (even approximately), calls for the fixing of a number of exact specifications.

The papers to be used must be agreed upon.

It must be decided how long the advertisement shall appear.

Whether in daily edition, or weekly, or both; and if in daily, whether it shall appear every day, every other day, or at other intervals.

The copy must not only be exhibited, but the style of display also agreed upon.

The great advertising agencies are an outgrowth of necessity to those who seek the newspapers and to the newspapers which seeks the advertiser. The millions of dollars sent annually in this country to newspapers, hundreds, and even thousands of miles from the advertisers, must eventually find a system of intelligent distribution which relieves the latter of the expense of individual investigation, and the former of the risks involved in the acceptance of doubtful customers. Well, the system has come along with the demand, and, with the history of the progress of national advertising upon scientific principles, the name of George P. Rowell & Co. will always be inseparably linked.—Record (Philadelphia, Pa.), Dec. 2nd, 1885.

What Makes a Good Advertisement?

An advertisement is of value not in proportion to its size, but according to its prominence and the completeness with which it expresses an idea.

It should be so arranged that the prominent line may catch the eyes of the class of persons likely to be interested. When this is done, the rest of the announcement will be read, although set in small type.

To address a Newspaper reader so as to secure attention, requires skill and experience. A card of four inches, whether well or ill done, costs the same, while in results there can be no comparison. We pay particular attention to the preparation of ATTRACTIVE advertisements.

To secure a handsome and effective display of an advertisement, care must be taken to furnish each paper with copy which, if followed, will produce the desired result.

An ordinary compositor has not the necessary skill to make an attractive card from manuscript, but even an apprentice will do very well when he has before him a printed slip showing which words should be displayed and what sorts of type may be advantageously used.

The merchant who intrusts his advertising to this firm may expect to have it attended to with the utmost fidelity and in the most accurate manner. It is in this way the Messrs. Rowell have built up the large and lucrative business which they now enjoy, and it is by strict adherence to these cardinal principles that they now owe the proud position they occupy.—Record (Philadelphia, Pa.), Dec. 2nd, 1885.

We Employ Expert Compositors.

To properly display an advertisement requires skill; to make it more attractive, and at the same time occupy less space, is a work of genius; but when advertising space cost dollars for every line, it pays to employ the best talent to be obtained. It is a false economy, however, to use an advertisement which is crowded and imperfect; better one insertion, and have it right, than three which are in a form which is unsatisfactory!

We have our own printing office arranged with especial reference to enabling our compositors to make the most attractive display possible, in the designated space, with every advertisement intrusted to their care.

Employing men of known skill and experience, we give them the additional benefit of constant practice, and are thus enabled to secure advantages of importance to our customers.

At all events, the advertisement to be used is the first thing upon which an understanding with the advertiser must be arrived at.

If it requires no special display, the space may be ordered to be "as small as possible."

If only a head line or one display line or word is to be made prominent, that statement is sufficiently definite.

If the space which an advertisement is to occupy is to be designated, it should be given in inches or lines, and if in lines, the kind of type should be specified (Agate or Nonpareil). The term "SQUARE" should never be used in this connection; its meaning is too indefinite. Fourteen solid agate lines make one inch in a Newspaper column, and twelve lines in nonpareil occupy the same space. Agate advertisements usually contain eight words to the line and nonpareil but seven.

When printed copy is furnished, in the absence of instructions to the contrary, it is taken as indicating the style of display desired.

Geo. P. Rowell & Co. have for twenty years conducted a general advertising business with American newspapers. They have spared neither labor or expense in the service of their customers. They have a most perfect system for transacting the business of newspaper advertising, and have established a credit with publishers; the result of which is there is no delay in the appearance of an advertisement when ordered by them. This is a matter in itself of prime importance. The advertiser may be sure of his advertisement appearing on time.—Daily Times (Pekin, Ill.), Jan 26th, 1886.

When an advertiser is content to leave the matter of display to our own judgment, it is generally best for all parties, but in contracts of importance it is our custom to have sample advertisements printed and approved before forwarding for publication. For this service it is not our practice to make a charge, unless the amount of labor involved seems excessive when considered in connection with the business to be done.

The experienced advertiser who knows exactly what he wants may always specify the style of display and the position his advertisement shall occupy. Every point which he deems important may be insisted upon to the veriest minutiae. We do not guarantee that any paper shall comply with all the requirements set forth, but unless every paper does so comply, that paper shall not have the order, or the advertiser be asked to pay for an insertion not in accordance with specifications. Publishers grant us every favor which can be allowed.

There is a great deal of confidential knowledge which is at the service of the customer who comes in contact with the business of the institution—points which it would be neither wise nor expedient to publish, but which are of incalculable advantage to the trade.—Record (Philadelphia, Pa.), Dec. 2nd, 1885.

After the advertisement has been determined upon, the next matter of importance is to name the Newspapers to be used.

Designate the Papers :

The list should designate whether daily or weekly issues, or both, are wanted, and whether, in dailies, the advertisement shall appear once, twice, thrice or six times a week, or include a Sunday edition, if one is issued in connection with the paper under consideration.

When the advertiser is competent to do so, he usually prepares his list without aid from us. When not posted about Newspapers, it is a practice with advertisers to write out a list of the towns in which they wish their announcements to appear ; after which, we write against each town or city the paper or papers which we recommend as best calculated to be of service.

Their whole business is conducted on the best system that experience and care can develop.—Courier (Buffalo, N. Y.), Dec. 13th, 1884.

Sometimes our patrons are not able to name either the papers which they ought to use or the places where they are issued. They wish to reach a class or section. For such we make known the publications to accomplish the object in view. To be able to inform the advertiser what particular journals are most read by a specified class of persons is one of the most important functions of the Advertising Bureau.

Yearly Contracts are Cheapest—By Far.

FIX THE TIME you wish to advertise, and plainly state it when you ask for an estimate of the cost. In a majority of papers, except the highest priced journals in the largest cities, the cost of inserting an advertisement for a year is not more than double the price for three months, and for three months not more than twice the cost for one month and for a month scarcely twice that demanded for a single week. The most successful advertisers make contracts by the year, but small advertisers, with limited means and credit, do not find it practicable to begin that way, and advertisements intended to serve a temporary purpose, or to try an experiment, sometimes require but one or a very few insertions.

An honorable advertising agency really serves the best interests of both the newspaper and the advertiser, and for reasons palpable to any intelligent mind. Such an agency, if there be one in the country, is that of Geo. P. Rowell & Co., as we believe all newspaper men who have dealings with them will heartily testify.—Presbyterian (Atlanta, Ga.), Oct. 6th, 1886.

How Much Money?

Persons who have had little experience as advertisers, often have a pretty clear understanding of what they would like to do, but are entirely ignorant of the probable cost.

We have made out for such a person a plan of advertising calling for an investment of $5,000, and on submitting it for approval, found our customer dismayed at the magnitude of the expense, he not having contemplated an expenditure exceeding $200 or $300, possibly no more than $10 or $25. In such a case labor would have been saved if, at the commencement of the negotiation, the question, "How much money are you prepared to devote to this advertising?" had been asked and answered.

To the advertisers in a small way—that is in a comparatively small way—one need not ponder long to see what an advantage such an institution really is. It would be impossible, it is impossible, for such individuals or firms, enterprising as they may be, to attempt profitably to obtain from the vastly diversified sections of the country such information as such an agency can furnish them at once and without cost. To the more extensive, to the colossal advertiser, indeed, the advantages of such an institution are too manifest to need explanation.

—Record (Philadelphia, Pa.), Dec. 2nd, 1885.

Our Customers Are Entitled to Our Best Services.

Whenever we are doing the advertising for any individual or firm, he is entitled to our best services. If he suggest using a paper which we know to be not the best for his purpose, we say so and give the reasons. We expend a good deal of time for small advertisers. We like to have our customers send us all the business they have to do, and when this is done we are content, and never take any exceptions because the amount is small.

We promise those advertisers who intrust their advertising patronage to our management that we will not allow them to be charged, in any instance, any more than the publishers' schedule rates; that we will procure for them the acceptance of any advantageous offer made to them definitely by any Newspaper publisher, advertising agent, or canvasser of responsibility: and in every case secure the lowest price obtainable for strictly first-class work. Competitors, anxious to gain a hearing and secure attention, occasionally make offers which it would advance the true interests of our customers to accept. In such cases we hold ourselves bound to secure for them the bargain offered. These bargains are sometimes based upon some actual advantage possessed by the person making the offer, and in carrying out the agreement we might employ the very person who made the proposal. In that case the interests of our patron are as fully protected, and we have the satisfaction of retaining the supervision of his expenditures, and knowing that they are such as we would recommend. To have the business pass through our hands, tends to prevent any working at cross purposes, duplication of orders, or other complications which are liable to arise when the advertiser and the Advertising Bureau do not work in confidential relations with each other.

A perfect system prevails in the management of the business of Geo. P. Rowell & Co., and the merchant who intrusts his advertising to this firm may expect to have it attended to with the utmost fidelity and in the most accurate manner. They have won the respect and confidence of all with whom they do business, and every succeeding year adds to their list of customers. The interests of the advertiser are carefully guarded.—Telegraph (Harrisburg, Pa.), Jan. 5th, 1886.

On Confidential Terms.

We work WITH the advertiser and FOR the advertiser, precisely as an expert whose services were obtained to aid him at his own office would do.

The secret of Rowell & Co.'s success is not hard to find. They do business in a fair, square way, perform what they promise, and live up to the very letter of their contracts, both with the advertiser and the newspaper publisher.—Times (Trenton, N. J.), Jan. 7th, 1886.

How We Are Paid.

We are paid for the service rendered the advertiser and for the expense of keeping up our establishment, by a commission from the Newspaper upon the price of the advertisements furnished by us.

For instance, a five-line advertisement to appear in a certain New York daily newspaper, the schedule price of which is 25 cents a line, makes a charge of $1.25. We charge the advertiser $1.25, and, when sending the order, the paper is instructed to charge us the same amount; but when we pay the bill a rebate or commission is allowed to us as "Advertising Agents."

Geo. P. Rowell & Co. have for twenty years conducted a general advertising business with American newspapers. They have spared neither labor nor expense in the service of their customers. They have a most perfect system for transacting the business of newspaper advertising, and have established a credit with the publishers, the result of which is that there is no delay in the appearance of an advertisement when ordered by them. This is matter in itself of prime importance. The advertiser may be sure of his advertisement appearing on time, and to the publisher, coming from Rowell & Co., there is no hesitancy in inserting advertisements as far as the financial standing of the advertiser is concerned.—Daily Record (Danville, Pa.), Feb. 6th, 1886.

The commission allowed varies with different papers.

Although many of our orders are for small amounts, yet some with which we are favored amount to as much as a thousand, and sometimes to thousands and tens of thousands of dollars.

If it were not that occasional orders are for very large amounts it would not be possible to maintain our establishment with the expenses necessary to make its appointments complete.

Why Prices Vary.

In the matter of prices for advertising space, Newspapers are in classes.

There are those who have a fixed schedule of charges, from which they do not deviate.

There are others who have schedule rates from which they will not vary much, unless the order is specially desirable, either on account of its amount, character, or the influence it will perhaps exert on other advertisers.

A third class is composed of Newspapers which take advertising, as a rule, on the best terms they can get.

The following are actual communications which have been received from honest, straightforward publishers of newspapers belonging to the last mentioned class :

"It is impossible for me to forward you a schedule of rates of Advertising, as I have none."

"I find that I have to make a separate contract with every Advertiser, and a schedule is rather a hindrance than a benefit."

"We cannot name an arbitrary rate, for prices must bend to exigencies. Sometimes our columns are full—again we are hungry."

"The reason we ask you $10 for your last Advertisement, and run the other for $5, is because when we took the first we were in need of 'Ads.' while now we have all we care for."

"Sometimes it pays to run dead Advertisements, and at other times live ones are an objection. I have not found it possible to be governed by cast-iron rates."

The GREAT Newspapers, those best established and most prosperous, are largely of the first class. For a small advertisement for a week these papers are generally very cheap (considering circulation and influence), and rather dear for a large one to go in by the year. They have so much short time advertising which goes in at full rates, that they have no space to spare at a reduced price, and consequently hold out very little if any inducement to advertisers to make yearly contracts. The number of newspapers of this class is small—not so many as a hundred, perhaps, out of the fifteen thousand which are published.

The price at which the AVERAGE Newspaper publisher will contract for an advertisement, to be inserted by the year, is influenced by a number of considerations. Among the questions which he may ask himself are these :

How much will the advertiser pay ?

If I accept the order at the price offered, am I sure to get my money ?

How much does the advertising amount to at my schedule rates? and is it probable that the advertiser considers himself obliged to use my paper? for if so, no great concession in price is necessary.

Are my columns so full that I shall not specially regret it if I fail to secure this order?

Is it a case where, if I do not accept the offer made I shall get nothing? and if I do accept, all that I do receive will be so much clear gain, because I have space to spare which nobody else seems to want at this time.

Nothing is more quickly affected by stagnation in business than space in the advertising columns of most Newspapers. It is unlike other kinds of merchandise. The grocer who owns a barrel of sugar, will have it in stock to-morrow if he does not sell it to-day; and although the price of sugar may decline, it will still be worth something: and there is a possibility that the price may advance. But with a publisher who has a column of space to dispose of the case is different. His Newspaper goes to press to-day! If he does not sell his space it is lost, and worse than lost, so far as immediate income is concerned: for if an advertiser does not pay for an advertisement to fill the void, reading matter must be set up for the purpose, and the printer must be paid for the type setting. Consequently, in the majority of Newspapers, except for the local patronage, which is compelled to come from the necessities of the case, the price of advertising depends largely upon the question, "How much can we get?" This reasoning is not in use in the one hundred great Newspaper offices, but is constantly used in the ten thousand less successful establishments, and must always so continue from the nature of the case.

Publishers become expert, and can tell better than would be imagined how much an advertiser will pay. The vender of a patent medicine who has sold his goods to a village druggist on a promise to advertise a year in the village paper, will find the price of that advertising held with greater firmness if the village editor happens to have heard of the transaction.

When a Newspaper publisher who has variable rates of charge, finds that he has much less advertising than he thinks his paper should carry, he is not likely to refuse even a low offer for a desirable advertisement. The publisher of a country weekly, who asks $100 per annum for a column, having a couple of columns to spare, will be likely to sell one at a low rate to a responsible purchaser—possibly as little as $20 would be accepted; but after the contract is closed, if another advertiser applies for a column, he will be likely to have to pay a higher rate; and if two or three come along, the paper becomes so crowded that the last applicant will be refused a column even at $100, on the ground that space must be reserved for transient customers.

So also a paper which has promised positions to two or three advertisers, ceases to have desirable positions to offer, and demands a high price from a new applicant, while a neighboring journal, which may be better or quite as good, not happening to have made any such contract, is entirely free, and may grant the place asked without an increased charge.

What we strive to make plain, is that so many things influence the price of an advertisement in the very large class of Newspapers which use a sliding scale of charge, that to promise an advertiser in advance exactly what we will do, we are obliged to charge enough to cover contingencies. We have sometimes procured advertising for $20, which we should not have been willing to promise for $50.

 Thoughtful advertisers who have read the last paragraph, will perceive that it may be sometimes a cheaper and better way to send along an order, and leave the price to be arranged afterwards, instead of tying their agent's hands by asking to be told beforehand exactly what he will do.

The most prompt and reliable advertising agents we have ever had business dealings with during our seven years experience. We have handled considerable advertising through them, and never had a dispute on an account, never had a delay of one moment more than is absolutely necessary to glance over their books.—Daily Herald (Tiffin, Ohio), Nov. 21st, 1884.

While the rates given by them to publishers may not in some cases be so high as those obtained direct from advertisers, their methods are so satisfactory, and their return so sure, that their orders are seldom if ever refused.—Freeholder (Cornwall, Ont.), Jan. 7th, 1887.

They have long had a more thoroughly perfected system, and better facilities for conducting the necessary negotiations and watching the fulfillment of advertising contracts, than has elsewhere ever been attempted.—Daily Post (Houston, Tex.), Jan. 9th, 1887.

If all Newspapers were in the invariable practice of requiring and receiving a uniform rate of compensation for a specified amount of advertising, then advertisers would find smaller occasion to avail themselves of the services of the Advertising Bureau.

Our Position.

If an advertiser knew an Advertising Agent, possessed of so much knowledge of the value and influence of Newspapers and of their advertising rates, as would make him always a competent adviser; if he knew him to be honest; if his every statement could be fully relied on; then the advertiser might have entire confidence; and the Agent's position would enable him to procure the most effective service for his patron at the lowest obtainable price.

We have undertaken to earn this confidence and to stand in this position.

Several years of business relation with Messrs. Rowell & Co. have led us to see that they are very careful in placing advertising for patrons, and as they are so prompt in paying, they secure a large patronage from both advertisers and publishers.—Daily Herald (Norristown, Pa.)

Direct the attention of an advertiser toward papers which he should and ought to use, and tend to intercept a portion of that patronage which goes to publications which costs greatly in excess of any power to benefit which they possess.—Republican (Fargo, Dak.), Jan. 14th, 1887.

In all our newspaper experiences we have never found an agency so reliable, so well and systematically managed, or so prompt as that of Messrs. Rowell & Co. Advertisers who desire the best service and to reap the most benefit from their investment cannot go wrong by applying to this firm.—Democrat and Sentinel (Lewiston, Pa.), Jan. 14th, 1887.

We cordially commend this firm to all who are contemplating advertising in a large way.—Times (Webster, Mass.), Jan. 14th, 1887.

When an advertiser applies to us for an estimate, having decided upon the copy he will use, and every specification as to time, display or position, it is our practice to carry out against the name of each paper upon his list the price which we recommend him to offer.

In fixing the price, judgment is needed. For an advertisement which would cost $5,000 in the most expensive Chicago daily, no more than $200 would have to be paid to secure the same number of insertions in a leading daily issued at Peoria. Often when nearly all the papers in a State are used, the best bargains are found to be among those to whom the largest sums of money are paid.

The undoubted truth of this statement sometimes leads advertisers into the error of supposing that a Newspaper must be valuable because it charges a high price, or that no price can be actually too high for a really good paper.

The most extensive advertiser fails to use all newspapers. He must select, therefore, those which are likely to pay him best. He knows that some great newspapers of superlative value demand so much for a yearly advertisement that he cannot judiciously use their columns except for short time contracts. He knows that silver is dear at $20 a pound and gold cheap at $200, but if he is offered silver at $5 a pound and finds gold held at $500, then he will make his investment in silver rather than in gold if he is wise.

How to Secure a Low Price.

Experience has demonstrated that the best way to secure a low price for a stipulated amount of advertising, is to first satisfy the publisher that he may be certain to receive promptly, whatever money is promised ; and then offer him, for the advertising, the lowest sum which there is any reasonable expectation that he may accept. If this offer is declined, it is well to look about to see if any other paper will cover the same field nearly as well, and if so, make to that one the same or a lower offer. If declined, the demands of each may then be considered and choice made between them, or perhaps a new offer may be made to one or both approximating their demand. If the field is not a very important one it may be advisable at this stage to drop both papers and expend the money elsewhere ; where better bargains are to be had.

If an advertiser is indifferent about particular papers and is willing to omit any which will not contract at a low rate, considering circulation, position and influence, then lower prices may be named than would be advisable if he were specially desirous of using all or nearly all the papers on a list.

Sometimes an advertiser wishes to reach the people of a certain State, but is not willing to exceed a certain named sum of money. In such a case we sometimes make a nearly complete list of all the Newspapers issued in that State, and against each affix a price which is very low for the service demanded. It is not expected or desired that all will accept, because should they do so the limit would be far exceeded. Sometimes the price is made so low, that it is not believed that more than one-fourth, or one-third will consent to do the work at the prices named. Frequently the result is surprising, especially if the proposals happen to be forwarded when advertising is slack. After all have been heard from, it is customary to review the correspondence, in company with the advertiser, or send it to him by mail with our comments on the merits of each case ; written on the letter from the publisher. Reasonable proposals from publishers at important points where the original propositions have not been accepted, can then be reconsidered and acted upon if desired.

Estimates of this sort are subject to revision by the advertiser, who brings to bear upon them any knowledge which his experience with his own advertising has given him ; and if we seem to him to have marked too high a price for any paper, he notes the case and the figures are amended. All correspondence received by either the advertiser or ourselves, having a bearing upon the advertising under consideration, is open to the inspection of both parties.

A Case in Point.

A Customer's View. Being acquainted with a firm here which was placing a large line of advertising with Rowell & Co., I dropped in to ask one of the partners his view of the service performed by them. He spoke very kindly of the firm, and said that their experience was all that could be desired. "They recently made an estimate for us to place our advertisement in a large number of high-priced papers which we had selected. Their estimate footed up $16,000. After going carefully over their figures, we asked them if they would accept $13,000 and guarantee insertions in all the papers specified. They replied, No! We own no papers, and we never sell what we have not bought. We then offered them $20,000 to give us their guarantee of the acceptance of the advertisement by all of the papers. They still declined on principle, but assured us that the whole would not cost the sum we were willing to pay. Their chief reason was that to promise every paper would make it tolerably certain that some would exact and receive a price in excess of their value merely on account of their arbitrary demands. We had known from experience that we could not do better any way than to place the order in their hands. They sent it out in their own way, and for $14,000 secured rather more than seven-eighths of the circulation represented by the list, and brought to us a pile of neatly-arranged letters, from all the remaining papers, showing that these could be had for $4,040. We looked into the matter, and concluded to reject all of these, for we were convinced that the prices, as Rowell's people had told us in the beginning, would be too great for the merits of the papers, for our particular use. We can frankly say to you, as we said to Rowell & Co., that we feel in declining our offer of $20,000 they saved us fully $3,000."—Moses King's Sketch in Bradstreet's (New York City), April 3rd, 1886.

Circulation Not the Only Element of Value.

In fixing the value of advertising space in any particular journal, the first question to be considered is the number of copies issued; next, the character or quality of the circulation. A well-printed paper is worth more than one badly printed; an influential journal carries more weight than one without reputation. A paper which habitually charges high prices for its advertising, thereby making its columns exclusive, will have fewer and, as a rule, a better class of advertisements, and is worth something more on that account. The value in all these considerations is recognized, but exactly how much each one is to be considered becomes a question of judgment.

They were really the first to reduce advertising to a science, and, notwithstanding the fierce competition in that branch of business, they have steadily held their own.—Standard (Cortland, N. Y.), Oct. 14th, 1886.

With the history of the progress of national advertising upon scientific principles, the name of Geo. P. Rowell & Co. will be always inseparably linked.—Daily Journal (Ithaca, N. Y.), Jan. 22d, 1886.

What the newspaper requires is security of payment. What the advertiser desires is certainty of fidelity to his interests, and assurances that the representations as to character, circulation, and availability of the mediums which he employs are to be depended upon. No agency can have a permanent and profitable existence lacking these elements. Base imitators always follow successful ventures, and may appear to succeed for a time, but they are really ephemeral and evanescent. It is only such institutions as Geo. P. Rowell & Co.'s Agency that have continued an unfailling success.—Morning News (Wilmington, Del.), Feb. 5th, 1886.

They have been long established, they have reduced advertising to a science, and their tendency is more and more to recommend to their customers only those papers which are best worth using.—Phœnix (Brattleboro, Vt.), Jan. 14th, 1887.

No matter how valuable any Newspaper may be, no advertiser wants to pay for it any more than the lowest price which can be made to secure the service required. If it can be had for $20, he will not willingly pay $25, even if he considers it worth $40. It is our constant effort to obtain for each of our patrons, ALL THE TIME, the very lowest price which a publisher will ever consent to receive for the amount of service required.

Publishers can well afford to give them better terms than other houses, from some of whom it is about as much trouble to collect money as it is to earn it.—Blizzard (Oil City, Pa.), Nov. 3rd, 1884.

While some agents have scarcely examined a publisher's bill, or are haggling over it, the too common way, Rowell & Co. have paid. This conduct also secures for advertisers lower rates, as publisher gives the best rates to those who thus deal with him.—Mail (Atlanta, Ga.), May 16th, 1885.

Their reputation for fairness in dealing and promptness of payment is the best. It is a pleasure to do business with such a firm, and there is always a disposition to grant them favors in return for the many they show.—Gazette (Kalamazoo, Mich.), Sept. 2nd, 1886.

All that is required of a publisher is to do his work according to contract. And when that is done, bill is rendered and back comes the check.—Chronicle and News (Allentown, Pa.)

Combine the happy faculty so rare among advertising agents of doing their duty by both the advertiser and the newspapers.—Daily Republican (Hudson, N. Y.), Jan. 15th, 1887.

We know that every publisher in this State is glad to receive their favors.—Courier (Palmyra, N. Y.), Aug. 22d, 1884.

Whatever that firm orders you get pay for sure.—Spirit of the South (Rockingham, N. C.), Feb. 5th, 1887.

Where We Owe Our Best Endeavors.

Our theory of the business is this : We make our money from the advertiser ; it therefore is to him that we owe our best endeavors. The commission which publishers allow is always a sufficient profit, often more than we ought to make ; and in some cases we waive the greater part of it for the purpose of securing a paper without asking the advertiser to increase his price ; but we never obligate ourselves to insert an advertisement in a paper which shall demand a gross price so much in excess of the amount which we are to receive as to subject us to an actual net loss.

The advertiser who in placing large contracts for advertising, avails himself of our services, does not lose the personal control of his expenditure. He is not in our hands, but in his own. His advertisement goes into no paper except at a price which he and we consider a low or a fair one. We are both interested that no publisher shall compel a payment above the value of his circulation and influence. He is interested to buy cheap so as to have money left to buy more or hold in reserve, and we, that the cost to him shall be moderate so that results shall show him a profit and induce further transactions.

The advertiser knows as well how much the advertisement is to cost, before he authorizes it to be done, as he would if doing the business himself direct with the publishers. He knows what each paper will cost if it accepts the work at the price offered, and that no increased price will be charged to him until he has authorized it after the reasons for paying an increased price have been brought to his notice and he has decided that they are good.

Although we are remunerated for our services by a commission or reduction allowed by the publisher at the time of settlement with the Newspaper, yet we recognize the fact that our profit actually comes from the advertiser (it is a part of the money which the advertiser pays, which remains with us as a commission or profit); without the advertiser we could make no profit; it is to the advertiser that we owe service. We work therefore for the advertiser and with the advertiser, and that we may do this to best advantage, it becomes advisable that we concentrate our efforts as far as possible upon the transaction in good faith of the business of those advertisers who put patronage most fully into our hands and most fully trust to us for faithful service. So long as these patrons are pleased with our methods of business, their patronage remains and their commendations influence others.

As there is one brand of flour more choice than any other, and one brand of coffee purer than others, so there is one agency whose business we find greater pleasure in accepting. Geo. P. Rowell & Co., experience has taught us, lead the van of advertising agencies in every desirable respect.—Daily Times (Glens Falls, N. Y.), Aug. 27th, 1886.

Does business in a fair, square way, performs what it promises and lives up to the very letter of the contracts, both with the advertiser and the newspaper publisher. Hence the confidence reposed in it both by the newspaper press and general public is not surprising.—Daily Herald (Steubenville, O.), Jan. 22d, 1886.

The Misleading Effect of (so-called) Competing Estimates.

Our method of business is incompatible with the system of competing estimates for advertising contracts. The prices which we name, are prices at which we will try to get the advertising done. If we set down $50 as a price at which an advertisement ought to be secured, and a competing agent guesses he can do it for $40, it may be a temptation to the advertiser to allow him to try, but when the publisher sends back the order and demands $75, the advertiser can never be quite certain that we would not have secured the service for the $50 we had named in the beginning.

In their method of auditing and settling accounts they could hardly improve, for we are always ready to believe that in five days after presenting the account we can rely upon a check. We feel assured that their relations with advertisers are equally as gratifying.—Western Mercury (Atchison, Kan.), Dec. 14th, 1884.

Correct and systematic in their business, and ever prompt in the satisfactory fulfillment of their contracts. They are made the medium through which a large number of the best advertisers in the country reach the public eye.—Daily Courier (Rome, Ga.), Aug. 29th, 1886.

We do not personally own or control any of the Newspapers for which we assume to contract. We therefore make the following sentence a head-line upon each "Estimate" issued from our office :

"THIS ESTIMATE
DOES NOT GUARANTEE THAT THE PUBLISHERS OF THE PERIODICALS NAMED UPON IT WILL ACCEPT THE ADVERTISING AT THE PRICES NAMED."

The above is an admission upon our part that we cannot always tell exactly what a publisher of a Newspaper will or will not do ; and this we are the more free to admit because we know that our position in the business of Newspaper Advertising, taken in connection with the patronage which we control, enables us to have a better knowledge upon the subject than is possessed by any other person whomsoever.

Promptness :

Promptness in the execution of advertising orders is desirable to the advertiser.

We invite those who have been annoyed with vexatious delays in the placing of advertising contracts, to examine and make themselves familiar with our facilities.

For promptness and reliability are in the front rank. They are systematic and correct in all their transactions.—Chronicle (Augusta, Ga.), Sept. 8th, 1886.

When it comes to promptness in business transactions, the advertising agency of Geo. P. Rowell & Co., New York, can't be beat. And we are sure that all who deal fairly with them will find them awake and square on all sides. As a successful advertising agency Rowell & Co. are entitled to the confidence of business men.—Messenger (St. Albans, Vt.), Jan. 21st, 1886.

The most prompt and reliable as advertising agents that we have had dealings with.—American (Sunbury, Pa.), Dec. 12th, 1884.

The most punctual advertising agents in New York City is the firm of Geo. P. Rowell & Co.—American (Sunbury, Pa.), Dec. 7th, 1883.

They are the most prompt of any business men we have dealt with.—Daily British Whig (Kingston, Ont.), Dec. 15th, 1884.

They are the promptest advertisers we have.—Times (Trenton, N. J.), Dec. 15th, 1884.

For promptness you take the cake.—Blizzard (Oil City, Pa.).

Publishers of Newspapers want advertisements. They understand our methods, and that promptness and the exhibition on their part of a desire to trade facilitates transactions.

Our advertising patrons are of the best class of business men. They are entitled to have their work done every time and all the time at the very lowest price which is ever accorded to the most favored customer. We ask no more than this for any of them, and for none are we willing to accept anything less.

In a majority of Newspapers we secure the insertion of advertisements at lower rates than would be accepted from others, because publishers know that our offers are at all times based upon comparative values, and that our contracts are only awarded where a fair price is accepted. They also know that their bills will be paid in cash, and promptly.

We always know where we can "raise the wind" at short notice when we "get hard up," if they owe us anything. We can name other good agencies, but Rowell's heads the list.—Herald (Winsted, Ct.), Dec. 19th, 1884.

We never had a disputed account. They are unequaled in these respects.—Standard (Bridgeport, Ct.), Dec. 12th, 1884.

We have been advertising for this company ever since in business, and when we send a bill, a check for the amount comes back on the next train.—Banner Watchman (Athens, Ga.), Dec. 25th, 1884.

Honorable, courteous, asking only fair treatment and paying their bills promptly, we are happy to say that the firm of Rowell & Co. shine out as an example of what the advertising agency ought to be.—Gazette (Yonkers, N. Y.).

Is the most prompt business house doing business with this paper. They should stand the world over at the head of all advertising agencies.—Daily Democrat (Shelbyville, Ind.), June 22nd, 1885.

Special merit is worthy special mention, and it is due Geo. P. Rowell & Co., of 10 Spruce Street, New York City, to say that their reputation for fairness in dealing and promptness of payment is the best.—Times (Owosso, Mich.), Sept. 10th, 1886.

The uncommonly prompt way in which Geo. P. Rowell & Co., advertising agents, conduct their business, especially in the payment of bills, is often mentioned by the press of the country.—Home Journal (New York City), Nov. 3rd, 1886.

They are promptness personified, and are square and liberal in all dealings.—Morning Herald (Titusville, Pa.), Aug. 9th, 1884.

We have yet to ask them the second time for money.—Ishmaelite (Sparta, Ga.), Jan. 3rd, 1883.

They pay promptly anything they agree to. Messrs. Rowell & Co. are the leading advertising agents of the country. The firm is popular with all advertisers and newspapers. The Times has had more or less business with this firm during the past sixteen years, and it gives us pleasure to refer to the satisfactory manner in which they have observed all contracts with us. Their business methods are the admiration of all newspaper publishers, for the firm is not over-exacting, and are especially prompt in paying all claims. In fact, they make it a feature of their business to pay all bills that are correct the same day they are received.—Times (Port Hope, Ont.), Jan. 14th, 1886.

When an advertisement is intended for only the highest priced papers, from which no reduction from rates is to be expected or hoped for, there is of course no delay about the insertion: and so too when, as is sometimes the case, an advertiser prefers to pay full prices for a line of advertising in papers of only moderate standing for the sake of obtaining the utmost good will of the publisher.

Payments.

When we have arranged for the insertion of an advertisement in any Newspaper, we undertake that the advertiser shall be required to accept and pay for only such insertions as are rendered in accordance with the specifications of his contract, and that omissions or incorrect insertions (should any occur) shall be made good by additional insertions.

Prompt settlement has in no way prevented a very close inspection of every item, the interests of the advertisers have been carefully watched.—Home Journal (New York), Oct. 31st, 1883.

There is something really delightful to the heart of a newspaper man in the promptness with which Messrs. Geo. P. Rowell & Co., of 10 Spruce street, New York City, respond to bills for advertising.—Press (Lexington, Ky.), March 30th, 1884.

The marking on the bills show that this prompt settlement has in no way prevented a very close inspection of every item, and that the interest of their patrons have been carefully watched.—Norristown (Pa.), Herald, Oct. 6th, 1883.

If all advertising agents were as fair in their dealings with newspapers as this firm is, a good many country editors would be happier men and better Christians.—Transcript (Middletown, Del.), Nov. 16th, 1883.

How We Want Our Pay.

In the absence of any agreement about payments, all bills for advertising done by us, which will expire within a month, are to be paid for in cash at the time the order is booked, unless from regular customers, to whom bills are rendered in accordance with established usage.

Payment for all advertising extending through more than one month is due monthly, dating from the day the order is received, unless different terms have been specially agreed upon. Omissions, wrong insertions and other deficiencies to be made good at end of contract, at time of final settlement.

They have long had a more thoroughly perfected system, and better facilities for conducting the necessary negotiations and watching the fulfillment of advertising contracts, than has elsewhere ever been attempted.—Press (Portland, Maine), Jan. 13th, 1887.

Reasonable in every way. Prompt, exact and courteous. It is a pleasure to do business with them.—Daily British Whig (Kingston, Ont.), Jan. 12th, 1886.

Publishers Who Allow the Agent's Commission to Advertisers.

Advertisers sometimes inquire whether, if dealing direct with the publishers of Newspapers, they would not be able to obtain the same allowance or commission upon which we rely to pay us for the work we do. Our observation teaches us that if the amount of their patronage is large they will generally be able to obtain a concession from rates. Nearly every publisher of a newspaper, in fact almost any man of business, likes to come in direct contact with his customer, and holds out inducements to that end, but the real object is pretty universally the attainment of a larger percentage of profit, a higher net price; and it has been the result of our experience and investigations that the most honorable publishers make no pretence of allowing an "agent's" commission to an advertiser doing his own business, and that those who are willing to make such a concession generally realize a better price than they would expect if the order came through our hands.

In all our newspaper experience we have never found an Agency so reliable, so well and systematically managed, or so prompt as that of Messrs. Geo. P. Rowell & Co.—Daily Times (Lebanon, Penn.), Jan. 21st, 1887.

The conclusion we arrive at is that the advertisers who have small orders, amounting to a few dollars in each paper (although footing up hundreds in the aggregate), cannot obtain any material concession from first-class Newspapers, and that those advertisers who have large advertisements, amounting to considerable sums in individual publications, are apt to learn that where they obtain the concession of the agent's commission, WE are able to secure a still lower net price for them, and generally retain our commission intact. For instance, a paper charging $100 for a specified advertisement, might gladly allow a concession, called an agent's commission, of $25, getting a net price of $75, while we should not think of recommending our customer to pay the particular paper in question more than $40, and from that sum should expect from the publisher the usual allowance for our commission.

This is a subject upon which an advertiser soon comes to have a decided opinion, and it is something in favor of the soundness of our conclusions, that so many who make a point of getting best service at smallest cost, deal largely with us.

Our business acquaintance of over ten years with the firm of Geo. P. Rowell & Co., of New York, has been one of pleasure and profit to us. No after-claps, nothing to make right, but everything right at beginning and closing of all contracts. We are confident from the manner the firm conducts its business, that we only voice the sentiments of thousands of papers when we say a more prompt or reliable firm does not exist in America. The only fault we have with them is that we are not permitted to do more advertising with them.—Phoenix (Parker, Pa.), Jan. 27th, 1883.

They represent the best daily and other newspapers of all American cities; the leading and most influential religious, agricultural and other newspapers published in the interests of the many and various classes, trades, sects or interests, and also such county journals of local influence as have peculiar merit which makes them of value to a class of advertisers.—Daily Journal (Biddeford, Me.)

Our Strongest Point.

The real strength of the Advertising Bureau lies in its ability to obtain the greatest concession from publishers' rates.

To know what Newspapers must have $100 for a one-hundred-dollar advertisement, and what ones will take the same for $50, or $30, is the most useful and profitable portion of the stock in trade of the successful Advertising Agency.

We have been dealing with Messrs. Rowell & Co. for twenty years, and while they insist upon very low rates, they also insist upon remitting the cash by the first mail after bill is rendered.—Clarion (Jackson, Miss.), Sept. 1st, 1886.

Is perhaps the most popular of all agencies.—Tribune (Bismarck, Dak.), Jan. 7th, 1887.

We repeat: "We are the Agents of the Advertiser." We do the best we can for him, and we want from the publisher the lowest price all the time. We give the advertiser the advantage of any knowledge which we possess; quote prices, which are often too low; procure acceptance of these low rates when possible, even at the expense of waiving a proportion, or in rare instances, the whole of our commission.

We are the Agents of the newspapers to the extent of always keeping open an office for the reception of advertising orders for them, quoting their rates, and bringing to the notice of advertisers the peculiar merit which each paper may possess. We are also the Agents for the Newspapers to the additional extent of a guaranty; and so promptly do we redeem that guaranty, an account against our house is everywhere considered equivalent to cash. WE SECURE THE CHEAPEST CONTRACTS THAT ARE MADE.

When it comes to promptness in business transactions, the advertising agency of Geo. P. Rowell & Co., New York, can't be beat.—Messenger (St. Albans, Vt.), Jan. 21st, 1886.

The Rowell Agency, which is really the father of the system of scientific advertising, has increased and prospered.—Record (Philadelphia, Pa.), Dec. 2nd, 1885.

We like to see business done in business style, and, therefore, indorse the advertising agency of Geo. P. Rowell & Co.—Daily Bulletin (Cairo, Ill.), March 6th, 1885.

Whenever we do advertising for any one, we consider him entitled to our best services. If he suggests using a paper which we know to be not the best for his purpose, we say so and give our reasons.

Those who entrust their advertising patronage to our care know that we make a living profit from its transaction, and have no interest except to serve them well. If we secure two papers for a price which would not be high for one of similar value, our percentage is as large, while the likelihood of the arrangement proving profitable to the advertiser, is doubled. The more service we secure our customer for the money expended, the greater the likelihood of profit to him and continued patronage for ourselves.

*Most Complete and Extensive File of Newspapers

We have a system of filing Newspapers, that is, of preserving them for future convenient reference by an arrangement of shelving and partitions; a separate space being accorded to each, labeled with the printed name of the paper it is intended to accommodate; by means of this arrangement a stranger finds a paper he wishes to examine, with something of the readiness that he would a word in a dictionary.

The best known house in this line.—Daily Item (Lynn, Mass.), Jan. 3rd, 1887.

They receive and keep regularly on file all the newspapers of special merit or influence which are issued throughout the land, whether daily, weekly or monthly.—Sentinel (Elkhart, Ind.), Jan. 15th, 1887.

The largest advertising firm in the United States. Not only the oldest, but the most thoroughly posted.—Times (Ashland, Ohio), Jan. 13th, 1887.

Notwithstanding this complete arrangement for the advertiser's convenience, he is not left to wait upon himself and hunt up his own papers, but is waited upon by civil and experienced clerks whose business it is to aid him.

We receive more than one hundred and fifty thousand Newspapers every three months, more than two thousand every day. They come from every quarter. They are heaped upon tables, the wrappers removed, the papers smoothed, folded and arranged by States, after which the various piles are passed over to those who have in charge the business of examining each separate paper to make sure that advertisements ordered from the Bureau are inserted according to specifications of contract.

A Complete System of Noting every Appearance of an Advertisement.

The country is divided into sections and apportioned. One person attends only to papers issued in the City of New York; another checks those in the State; one has Canada, one the Territories, the Pacific Coast, and so on.

Every paper in which an advertisement is running is spread open, and the advertisement (one or more) marked with a crayon so as to be easily found or seen at a glance when the advertiser comes to make his examination.

Checking Cards.

The checking cards are arranged to show the actual number of insertions which every advertisement is to receive. Special marks are used to designate special things, and the checking clerk, guided by instructions, produces a page which will show the advertiser whether his insertions have been truly and correctly given, or otherwise.

The name of the advertiser, the space, position, style and length of time an advertisement must appear, are all indicated. The various marks have their special meanings—all easily understood, and not readily mistaken.

If a paper fails to come to hand, the checking card reveals the fact, and the missing copy is sent for.

If an advertisement is out of position, if typographical errors are observed in it, or if for any reason it is not what the advertiser is entitled to expect, a notice of the fact is dispatched to the publisher.

The checking cards are kept permanently for inspection by advertisers. The papers themselves are retained but three months from date of issue ; after that time the Bureau does not guarantee to exhibit them.

After the examination and marking, the paper is again folded, and receives a heavy mark on its upper right hand corner to indicate that it has passed through the requisite examination. It is then placed in the space (pigeon-hole) accorded to it.

The Newspaper Room.

These pigeon-holes, placed in tiers or cases, form galleries, the whole being systematically arranged alphabetically by States, the name of the State being designated on the cases and again over the entrance to each separate gallery.

An advertiser whose rule is to pay no bills until he sees all the papers, can here be accommodated. An advertising contract amounting to one hundred thousand dollars per annum can be looked after (every copy of every paper examined) by the advertiser, who will devote three days' time to the examination four times a year.

The time usually required for examining papers is mainly used in looking after the advertisement which is not there. This work has all been gone over beforehand by the checking clerk, and each advertisement marked plainly with a black crayon. If it is so marked, the advertiser takes in its appearance, style, position, everything in an instant, and if it is not marked he need go no further ; it is not there !

One material advantage of complete files, so conveniently arranged, is the facility with which it is possible to produce for an advertiser samples of all the papers in which he may wish to insert his announcement ; that he may see for himself what every paper looks like, and judge what style of advertising will be most effective.

Marked Newspapers for Advertisers.

In addition to the thorough arrangement for proving insertion of advertisements, it is the custom of the Bureau to request every publisher who inserts an advertisement on its order, to send to the advertiser a marked copy of the first issue in which a new advertisement appears. Most publishers comply with this demand and some make a practice of sending a paper regularly to an advertiser while his advertisement appears, whether requested to do so or not.

The statement concerning marked papers sent to advertisers does not apply when an advertisement is inserted in combinations of papers at a lump price for the whole, as in the case of Geo. P. Rowell & Co.'s SELECT LIST OF LOCAL PAPERS, for which advertising rates are given by the inch of space, to be inserted by the month in all the newspapers there catalogued in a State or section of country, for although the advertiser is likely to receive a considerable number of these papers, our contract gives us no actual right to demand that any shall be sent. So also with the Lists of Newspapers issued on what is known as the Co-operative plan. Of these, one paper only from each separate list, is all that is ever mailed to the advertiser.

In the case of the Select Local List, WE receive and place on file all the papers, and examine each one separately to note that the first issue of each advertisement ordered by us is exactly as it ought to be.

In the case of the Village Papers (the so-called Co-operative Lists), we only examine one of the papers issued by each of the several Unions, for with them, if the advertisement is seen in one it must appear in all from the nature of the method by which they are printed.

Recapitulation.

We are in frequent communication with Newspapers throughout the country, and the largest patrons of a great number of them. An Agency covering so wide a field, having so large and so general a business, with an established reputation and undoubted credit in every quarter, has the best claims for the best terms from publishers, and is dealt with on a higher plane, and on more liberal terms than could reasonably be asked for, or expected, by parties having but few patrons and a limited patronage.

The "ESTIMATE" prices are what we recommend the advertiser to authorize us to pay; and the advertiser is at liberty to cut down any which are higher than he is willing to pay for the paper in question; or than he would be obliged to pay if he placed the order elsewhere.

The advertiser is at liberty, at any stage of the negotiation, to erase from his list any paper which he does not desire to use at the price named. When these facts are considered, it appears that there exists no very good reason for inviting competition. The chances are in cases where competition is invited, and the contract awarded where lowest figures are given, that the result does not satisfy the advertiser in point of net cost, as ascertained when the advertising has actually been done and paid for. If the price is satisfactory the chances are that the appearance of the advertisement as printed in the papers is not so. It is sometimes possible to make an advertisement technically in accordance with a careful specification and still be poor and unsatisfactory.

It is the practice of some advertisers, not only to place their business in the hands of an Agent, but to undertake, at the same time, to attend to it themselves also.

They furnish the Advertising Bureau with the names of the Newspapers in which they wish an advertisement inserted, and simultaneously address the publishers of the papers for the purpose of obtaining quotations direct from them.

The estimate in due time arrives from the Advertising Bureau, and is found to be lower than the prices which the publishers demand; or at least is so in most cases; so the advertiser determines to send his order to the Agent.

The Agent now sends out the advertising order; and the publisher receiving it remembers that he has already quoted a price for that particular advertisement; and that not only has he named to the advertiser a higher price, but he also remembers that if the order had come to him from the advertiser without the interposition of the Advertising Agent, that there would be no deduction to be made for an Agent's commission. The publisher is human, and would naturally prefer to receive a larger price, and have it net.

It is known that the Advertising Agent receives a commission from the publisher for his services in procuring, forwarding and guaranteeing the payment for advertising patronage; but it must be plain to any one who gives the matter thought, that the publisher will not thank the Agent for intercepting business which would be sure to reach him; and not only lower the price, but insist upon a further reduction in the shape of a commission for the service he claims to have performed.

It is the business of an Advertising Agent to create new business; to induce new men to advertise, to induce those who are advertising a little to advertise more.

We have been in business more than twenty years, and have customers who have dealt with us through nearly the whole of that time; yet the only customers whom we have ever had, who have seemed to be pleased with us and to appreciate what we could do for them, have been those who placed themselves in our hands, and trusted us, because they believed that we could and would serve them advantageously.

For those advertisers who have a credit so well established as to make them safe customers, we secure the most important advantages. We can devote our energies to securing what is wanted, without constantly contemplating a possible loss liable to sweep away, not only all commissions earned, but, in addition, leave us responsible for heavy obligations to publishers.

We seek the patronage of Responsible Advertisers who will pay when the work is done, and of Experienced Advertisers who will know when they are faithfully and intelligently served.

While advertising is sent out through our Newspaper Advertising Bureau, we are pleased to furnish postal cards which may be addressed to those publishers who apply for patronage, stating that the work is done by us and referring them to us. If so instructed we investigate the merits of all proposals made, and specially direct attention to such as have any peculiar merit. We supply these postal cards to several of our patrons who have the practice of answering all letters addressed to them. They find them a convenience, and the cards are worth the cost, to us, as an advertisement of our business.

We have a conspicuous card which some of our patrons find to be a convenience; to which they refer solicitors of advertisements with whom they have not the time to talk, referring all such to our house. These cards have a tendency to divert some visitors to whom the advertiser has not the requisite time to attend, and we bring their proposals to notice whenever they have unusual merit, which is not always the case. This card is sent to any patron of ours whenever a desire to that effect is expressed.

We like to have our patrons make a practice of throwing into a drawer or pigeon-hole all the communications and proposals they receive on the subject of advertising, and from time to time send the same to us by mail or otherwise. We sometimes find valuable suggestions and information among papers and letters of this sort, which would not otherwise have been so directly brought to our notice, and we make the suggestion more freely, as such communications constitute a class of correspondence with which business men in general do not care to encumber their files.

NATURAL MISTAKES MADE BY SOME ADVERTISERS.

One who understands the business, and does not mind the detail work necessary in making negotiations, attending to the correspondence, paying small bills by the dozen or hundred; who has always done his own advertising and always intends to do so; likes to get our estimates of cost, once in a while, in order to compare them with what he is himself paying; and to use them as a lever to force some publishers down in price; is led to think that we LIKE to copy off long lists of papers and spend hours in making columns of figures for his instruction, although no possible profit to ourselves can result.

Another: just starting out on an advertising campaign; and for reasons of his own intending to place all the contracts himself; but having little knowledge of newspaper values; likes to get our estimates as a sort of guide. Perhaps he intends sending his agents through a section of country to sell goods which he will promise to advertise in the local papers. He don't know exactly where his agents will go, or in how many papers he will advertise, but likes to have us carefully prepare a table for all the papers in a State showing what will be a fair price for him to pay to each. It serves as a guide for his agent, and as such is valuable. He has no intention of entrusting the business to our management when he applies for the estimate: and no intention of paying us for our services when the estimate has been made. He thinks that it will gratify us to have an opportunity to make figures for him, and he is a kindly man and willing to gratify us to that extent.

A third, a good and kind man, knows a struggling advertising broker to whom he would willingly do a favor, if it cost him nothing, decides to ask us to furnish an estimate for a proposed line of advertising: intending, when he has secured the estimate, to pass it over to his protege, to aid him in arriving at proper figures to pay. He imagines that he is giving us actual pleasure in permitting us to prepare the framework of his advertising structure, out of our own material and at our own expense.

A fourth man has no thought of advertising at all, but is curiously interested to know what would be the cost of a certain amount of publicity if he should, at some future time, happen to want it: thinks that we would, as soon as not, devote a day or two of the time of a competent estimate clerk to the business of satisfying his thirst for knowledge.

Still another man knows the names and address of half a dozen Advertising Agencies and believes them to be all alike, and that advertising space can be described with mathematical precision and delivered with as much certainty as sugar or flour, and that he may obtain estimates from all and find his profit in awarding the order to the lowest bidder:—or may divide it, counting off to each those papers which he guesses he can obtain at a lower rate than another agent guesses that he would have to pay.

The extensive advertising of our own business, which it is our policy to keep up, brings us into contact with all of these and kindred classes, and sometimes we are led into devoting a good deal of attention to the applications from some such, treating their applications in good faith and devoting to them an amount of time which costs a considerable sum in dollars and cents, and cannot be counted on to bring any return.

Our office is intended MORE for the accommodation of those who want our services than it is for those who don't; and we work more cheerfully and carefully for those who actually wish to avail themselves of our facilities than we do for those who don't know whether they do or not.

It is an every-day occurrence in our office that the labor of giving an advertisement all the attention it ought to have is greater than the profit on that particular order can possibly be expected to pay for: but for a patron such work is undertaken cheerfully, while from an experimenter, whom we do not know, and who may be a mere idle inquirer, we would be most likely to decline the employment.

OUR REGULAR CUSTOMERS KNOW US! and we know them! but new applicants, who SEEM to belong to the above classes, sometimes fail to receive from us the considerate and pains-taking attention which they are led to expect, and which the apparent consequence of the work they have in mind would really entitle them to receive if the application has really been made in good faith.

An applicant who applies to us in good faith, knowing us to be competent to serve, believing that we will attempt to do no work without a profit sufficient to pay for having it done well, but that we do not overcharge customers and may be safely trusted, makes no mistake when he states in his application that he actually means business and applies to us because he wishes to deal with us.

NEW YORK, May 2nd, 1887.

A CRITICISM of the foregoing pages, from a Publisher's standpoint, and a Remedy for existing evils; pointed out by Publishers of wide experience.

It must not be supposed that we are unaware that the foregoing pages are open to criticism from the standpoint of a publisher who has a variable schedule of Advertising rates, and has not given much thought to the circumstances which have caused the Advertising Agency to occupy a somewhat anomalous position. For the purpose of bringing the subject so plainly before newspaper men that it cannot fail to be fully understood by them, we recapitulate some of the points to which a Publisher who has no uniform rate of charge is likely to take exceptions.

We do this freely and unhesitatingly, because the objections are more apparent than real, and because we believe that business should be conducted in good faith—stripped of everything like false pretenses.

We have asserted.

"It is to the Advertiser that we owe service.

"We are the agents of the Advertiser.

"We make our money from the Advertiser.

"Without the Advertiser we could make no profit.

"We do the best we can for him.

"We work with the Advertiser and for the Advertiser.

"We want from the publisher the lowest prices all the time.

"The real strength of the Advertising Bureau lies in its ability to obtain the greatest concessions from Publishers' rates. To know what newspapers must have $100 for a $100 advertisement, and what ones will take it for $50 or $30, is the most useful and profitable portion of the stock in trade of the successful Advertising Agent.

"It is our constant effort to obtain for each of our patrons, all the time, the very lowest prices which a publisher will ever consent to receive for the amount of service required.

"No matter how valuable a newspaper may be, no advertiser wants to pay for it any more than the lowest price which will be accepted for the desired advertisement.

"If it can be had for $20, he will not willingly pay $25 even though he consider it worth $40.

"If we secure two papers for a price which would not be dear for either, our percentage is as large, while the probability of the arrangement proving profitable to the advertiser is doubled: the more service we secure for our customer for his outlay the greater is the likelihood of continued patronage from him.

"We give the advertiser the advantage of any knowledge which we possess: quote prices which are often too low; and procure the acceptance of these low rates when possible.

"Sometimes the price is made so low that it is not believed that more than one quarter or a third of the papers will do the work at the prices named.

"These prices are what we recommend the advertiser to authorise us to pay: but he is at liberty to cut down any which are above the limit he has in his mind for the paper in question,

"Publishers of newspapers want advertisements and understand our methods, and that prompt replies and an exhibition on their part of a desire to trade facilitates transactions.

"If the offer is declined, the same or a lower offer is forwarded to another paper, if there is one which will cover the field quite or nearly as well, or, if the field is not an important one, it may, at this stage, be thought better to expend the money elsewhere if more favorable rates are offered.

"Sometimes when half or a quarter of all the papers in a State are desired, it is found advisable to offer the advertisement, at a price, to all or nearly all which are issued.

"It is not expected or desired that all will accept, for should they do so the advertiser's limit would be exceeded.

"When all have been heard from, it is customary to review the correspondence, in company with the advertiser, or send it to him by mail, with our comments written on each letter from a publisher, and from the most attractive of these, those which name a reasonable price, and set forth reasons to show that they are worth what they demand, the advertiser chooses such as he believes are needed to cover the selected field; and all other offers are withdrawn or cancelled.

"Our patrons are of the best class of business men, and are entitled to have their work done at the very lowest price which is ever accorded to anybody.

"Although we are remunerated for our services by a commission, allowed us by the publisher, yet our profit actually comes from the advertiser."

Some time during the year 1886 we forwarded to American Publishers a pamphlet not very different in its tenor from the article now under consideration.

It attracted attention in many quarters, and Mr. J. R. Bettis, of the Little Rock Arkansas Democrat, wrote a lengthy criticism upon the positions taken by us; pointing out with conspicuous clearness much which we have said above.

We will quote nearly all of the points made by Mr. Bettis, using mainly his own words, though with changes in the position of sentences, and omitting portions not suitable for our purpose. We believe that Mr. Bettis will admit that we have taken no unwarranted liberties with his statements or conclusions.

He says, referring to the pamphlet in question, that there are several pages devoted to pointing out all the weak places in the Publisher's defences, and how to take him at the greatest disadvantage.

That these inexhaustible pages are teeming with instructive points and hints for newspaper men.

That there is nothing underhanded about them, and while there is much that would make a denominational newspaper abjurgate, there are many cold-blooded truths which it would be well to have read by Publishers, and applied by them.

That Messrs. Geo. P. Rowell & Co. speak not only for themselves, but for the majority of Advertising Agents.

That through their control of a large patronage, they occupy an impregnable position. That they have grounds for such a position is nowhere more plainly shown than in the hundreds of pages of Newspaper Advertisements in their American Newspaper Directory.

Mr. Bettis, in a calm and unimpassioned way, paints the picture of a publisher newly started in business, placing himself in connection with the Advertising Bureau, and thinking he has secured a trusty representative at a good point, but who, after a while, finds out from actual experience, that this agent is the "greatest bear on Advertising prices that he has to contend with."

He enumerates many of our claims : among others, that

We spare no labor or expense in the service of the Advertiser.

We make his interests our own.

Our services are due and rendered to the Advertiser.

The Advertiser's interests are the only ones we have at heart.

That we guarantee satisfaction to the Advertiser.

Consider him entitled to our best services.

Do the best we can for the Advertiser and want from the publisher the lowest price—all the time.

Give the Advertiser the advantage of any knowledge which we possess.

Work WITH the Advertiser and FOR the Advertiser—precisely as the Advertiser would do his own business did he possess our facilities.

That our real strength lies in our ability to obtain the greatest concessions from publishers' rates.

And from all this Mr. Bettis concludes that we "Are in fact the Advertiser's Agents," and proceeds to comment upon our assertion that

"We never obligate ourselves to insert an advertisement in a paper which shall demand a gross price so much in advance of the price we are to receive as to subject us to an actual net loss."

"That we are paid for the expenses of keeping up our establishment by a commission from the newspapers."

And he asserts

"It is for services rendered the other party."

Comment is made upon our statement that we are the Agents of the papers only to the extent of a guaranty (the maintenance of an office for the reception and forwarding of Advertising orders might be added to this); and Mr. Bettis proceeds to assert what no one denies, that some of our Advertising patrons are richer than we; and that for such no guaranty is worth paying for.

He makes the assertion that he has lost more money on foreign Advertising Agents than through Advertisers—ten to one; thus, apparently, admitting that he, in common with many others, has been in the habit of extending recognition to Agents who were not entitled to so much consideration.

He asks, and gives, the definition of the word "Agent." According to Webster, it is "one who is authorized to act for another," and in commercial usage, "one who acts for an absent principal, as the latter would act for himself if on the spot."

"It involves a trust," says Mr. Bettis, "by the principal of his interest, to the guardianship of the agent."

He concludes that in some way it has come about that the Advertising Agent does not stand in this relation to the Newspaper publisher; and asserts that "Such a state of things is found in no other line of business.

"Neither the manufacturer or the merchant would tolerate such a representative for an hour!"

And then asks:

"What are the possibilities of improving the situation, from the publishers' standpoint?"

He has shown or asserted (and no one will deny it) that no manufacturer or merchant would tolerate such a representative for an hour.

Let us consider, however, what would be the case with the manufacturer who had a good Agent, with whom he had no fault to find; but whose business should be so well conducted that it was satisfactory to his principal.

If the manufacturer reasoned, "This Agent is worth something to me, consequently another will be worth just as much ;" and pursuing this policy, appointed several in the same city ; and if he happened to hit upon one with a bad reputation, with no store and no credit, should extend the same terms to him, although in this case he exacted cash with his orders, how long would the original Agent (who was satisfactory) tolerate such a condition of affairs ?

It must be acknowledged on all sides that no comparison can be instituted between the Agent for a manufacturer ; and an Advertising Agent ; for no manufacturer's Agent undertakes to represent fifteen thousand manufactures ; and no manufacturer or merchant appoints a dozen or a hundred Agents (more or less) in the same field to underbid each other and cry down the value of his merchandise.

No one understands the point we make, or its remedy, better than the writer to whose comments we have called attention ; and it so happens that he had previously gone over the same ground in an address delivered before the National Editorial Association, at its annual meeting in Cincinnati, February, 1886. We will proceed to quote from that address. It will be perceived that he not only points out the same difficulties, but suggests a proper, natural and feasible remedy.

" Our foreign advertising business is in a very unsatisfactory condition."

" I shall consider the matter only as it affects the publishers of the lesser dailies and the standard country weeklies."

" These constitute a large majority of the periodicals of the country."

" The great metropolitan dailies and weeklies are in a position to protect themselves."

" We are doing the business at prices which are unprofitable and below the real value of the service rendered."

" Our largest and most important customer is the Advertising Agent."

" The Advertising Agent is in an anomalous position."

" Who is this who comes to us with persistent offers of a quarter, a third, or a half of our reasonable and just price ? Uses every sophistry and brings to bear every influence which he can wield to force from us the very last farthing of reduction ?"

" Surely this is not our agent !"

" He is in the anomalous position of a representative of both sides of a bargain."

" He has to get the lowest price he can for the advertiser and the highest he can for the publisher—two masters almost as hard to serve jointly as God and mammon."

" It is the fault of the system that I am attacking ; and not those who are honestly working under it."

" From their peculiar position, and through the influence of the sharp competition that exists among themselves, the agents are bears in the advertising market."

" Let us consider, now, how much of the burden of blame lies on our own shoulders."

"Some of us have placed our prices too high—higher, in fact, than we expect to get—and so offered a special inducement to all patrons to reduce the rate as much as they could."

"How foolish any advertiser would be to pay these papers full rates!"

"The great inequality of advertising rates have almost become a by-word in the business world!"

"The difference in cost between printing an edition of 10,000 and 20,000 papers is comparatively small, and hence a rate per thousand of circulation that would be unprofitable to the first would be profitable to the second."

"Considering only papers of like circulation and character, there are differences in price that can only mean that some are wrong."

"I fear most of our rates are made by guess-work, and the result shows how human minds vary."

"Again gentlemen have deprecated the value of our advertising space by being willing to barter it for articles of little value."

"If we ourselves hold our columns of so little worth, we need not be surprised if others put an equally low value upon them."

"Other circumstances and motives through which we sacrifice our true interests in this connection are many: fear of unequal and unscrupulous competition, financial straits, haste to fill unoccupied space—their name is legion."

"Summing it all up, we find that the larger share of the blame for the unsatisfactory condition of things lies with ourselves."

"Is there an available remedy, partial or complete? I hold that there is. It has been in use for ages, and never so widely as to-day. It is organization."

"The general idea would be to agree upon a MINIMUM tariff of rates, carefully and intelligently made."

"I would have a written and binding agreement made, which would have among its clauses the creation of an Advertising Committee."

"The committee would employ a RELIABLE agent at some central point to take charge (under their direction) of the foreign advertising business."

"He would of course be EXCLUSIVELY the representative of the press, and would be paid a reasonable compensation either in salary or commission."

"Advertising offerings made to publishers direct would be referred to this agent, and advertisements would be received from that territory only through him."

"The average business man is willing to pay a just profit upon what is sold him; all he asks is that he is buying as cheaply as anybody else."

It will have been observed that all we want for our most valuable customer is the lowest prices; and we conduct our business in such a way as to deserve this consideration from the hands of Publishers.

If a Publisher never varies his price, HE gives us the lowest price all the time, and we are satisfied on that point.

If he sometimes varies his schedule of charge, we want the most favorable rate he is giving, and we intend to do our business so well that he will be willing to accord it. When he does grant it he grants all we ask, and all we promise to obtain for our Advertising patrons.

But even at the lowest price we cannot send every paper all the business its Publisher would like to have; for if another of equal value will do the work for less, the Advertiser will take his choice between the two; he expects us to truthfully advise him on this point, and we do so to the best of our ability.

The most extensive Advertiser fails to use all newspapers, and must, therefore, select those which will be likely to pay him best at the prices asked: and other considerations being equal, Advertising in a paper having two thousand circulation is worth double what it is in another issuing but a thousand copies.

Mr. W. H. Brearley, of the Detroit, Michigan, News, read an essay to the same Editorial Association which Mr. Bettis addressed, and Mr. Brearley also pointed out the practices of some Publishers in the matter of charges for Advertisements, and also suggested a remedy for existing evils. We quote from his address at considerable length:

In approaching this subject I am reminded of my experience on the Mississippi River during the war. After the first brush with a sand-bar, the pilot ordered a leadsman on the bow, and our regiment of landsmen were soon introduced to that unique and wonderfully constructed vocabulary of calls—"Twain," "quarter less twain," "mark twain;" but the call that was most euphonious and full of meaning (and this, by the way, is the one that reminds me of the advertising rates of some papers), was that never-to-be-understood or forgotten cry of, "Nine feet and no bottom."

How can it be otherwise when two things exist in many papers that render the finding of bottom rates so near an impossibility.

At this point in the discussion I have seen men jump up and deny that their journals ever deviate from their rates.

I remember one such incident, that of a paper whose proprietor, without qualification and with great vehemence, declared that he "never allowed any one a discount, not even an agent." The following day I had a friend of mine write him, asking if he would accept a five-inch advertisement at a rate which I knew to be exactly half his rates. His reply was, "Your offer is very low, but you may send it along and I will publish it."

A few days ago I was talking on this subject with a leading New York advertising agent, who said, "I have had a customer take my estimate, giving a list of papers with the prices of each carried out, and these prices, by the way, at rates much below the papers published rates, and instead of contracting through me, he tried the experiment of ordering direct, but offered just one-half the prices I had made." "Did they reject his offers?" I enquired of him. "No; nine out of ten accepted his offers, and many of them were good papers." Then, making an emphatic gesture, he added, "Now, what can you do with papers that deal like that? I don't care what their rates are, if they are reasonable, but it is essential to know if they will 'stick' to them."

One of the two things I referred to as conducing to fluctuating advertising rates is the fact that the rates of some are too high and cannot be maintained. Evidence of this was recently supplied by a table sent out by a leading advertising agency, and which shows a difference of 300 per cent. between the rate of the highest and lowest upon the list of forty papers quoted, when reduced to a basis of comparison, per inch per issue per thousand circulation.

The remedy of these evils can be suggested by the fact that there are too many papers competing for business, and often without either experience or sufficient capital. A successful newspaper can only be established where there is a field for it, by one thoroughly competent and experienced and who has sufficient capital. The absence of any one of these factors is usually fatal, and yet there are experiments being constantly made by those who are destitute of all three.

If advertising was only done with papers upon the basis of their actual instead of their claimed circulation, and upon the basis, also, of rates that could universally be conceded to be just to the advertiser and journal alike, these ephemeral and irresponsible sheets would be eliminated.

This brings me to a suggestion which I think deserves the examination of a committee, to be reported upon at our next meeting, and which might be worded something like the following resolution :

“Resolved, That a committee of three be appointed by the chair to consider and report to this convention an advised rate per inch per thousand circulation for various degrees of circulation and various general classes of journals.”

The advertising agency should not be hastily denounced. They have their complaints that deserve a hearing; to their credit also should be placed an immense amount of business that they have worked up. To this, many papers are greatly indebted; especially so are the small-circulation journals. But when all has been said, and much more, that ought to be conceded to the credit of the advertising agents, the fact still remains that the advertising agents are the agents of the advertiser and not the paper. They usually approach the subject before us from the standpoint of the advertiser and not the paper. Special agencies are being established in New York City by many of the larger papers in consequence of this fact, and the desire to have their paper represented by some one who will look at advertising from the standpoint of the paper's interest.

The system has its evils as well as advantages, and I have not time for its discussion. Suffice that I would favor the establishment in New York City, and possibly in Boston, Philadelphia and other large cities, of a “Publishers' Association,” membership to be restricted to those papers who adopt a rigid system of publishing actual circulations, and the adoption of uniform rates (per inch per thousand as suggested by the resolution) and then only by papers who are willing to pay $50 or more per year. I would have this Association rent a suite of suitable rooms, which would be headquarters for all papers that are members and to be conducted under rules to be adopted at organization and thereafter controlled by an executive committee.

I would have the work of this Association include many things needed by the publishers, one of which would be the collecting and distributing of information concerning reliability of advertisers, the old agencies, etc., in some such way as the editorial departments are served by their telegraph news associations. Here the papers of the Association would be always on file. This need not and should not conflict with the old agencies, with whom I have the most friendly relations.

I do not think that this should be too hurriedly entered upon. I would suggest that the whole matter be referred to this committee, who should be requested to bring in a specific recommendation at our next session.

Many Publishers Make Comments.

In pursuance of this suggestion of Mr. Brearley's, a meeting was held at Rochester, New York, in February last, and then was formed the “American Publishers' Association.” One of the suggestions put out at that meeting was to the effect that an association composed of the leading Advertising Agencies would be a step toward solving the questions in which all are interested.

We have received communications upon this subject from every quarter; and quote here extracts from some of them.

IN FAVOR OF ORGANIZATION.

From Cleveland, Ohio.—I am decidedly in favor of an Association of Advertising Agents, and if such an association could be formed of strictly responsible fair dealing agents, I am certain that a harmonious system could be established between such agents and the leading Publishers of this country, that would be conducive to great good for all parties concerned. It would, to my mind at least, promise the abolition of competition between Publisher and Advertising Agent, which is at present the most demoralizing element in the business.

From Raleigh, N. C.—The suggestion that the Advertising Agents form an Association of responsible agents, and admit none excepting such as the Association can recommend to Publishers, we think a good one; and is one we made to the meeting at Rochester.

From Cleveland, Ohio.—My impression is that you and others of your profession or calling, should, without any regard to the newspapers, organize into an Association, and determine your own status, just as we are doing in the "American Newspaper Publishers' Association."

From Pittsburgh, Pa.—We would favor an organization of agents, believing that such an organization might limit the mischief done by unreliable Publishers and Advertising Agents, making the lot of the reliable members of each class happier and better.

From Lynchburg, Va.—It is with real pleasure that we learn that there is in contemplation the organization of an Association of Advertising Agents; it will be of immense advantage to Publishers and great protection to responsible Agents.

From Griffin, Ga.—The idea of an exclusive Agents' Association of responsible parties meets my hearty appreciation. If such an organization can be formed it shall receive my hearty support and co-operation.

From Sparta, Ga.—I think the idea of Advertising Agents forming an Association a good one, and will stand square up to them and will not receive work from any one who does not belong to said Association.

From Portland, Ind.—In much favor of the scheme of Associated Advertising Agents, and would gladly confine my dealing with such an Association when established.

From Burlington, Vt.—If the good Agents take hold of the matter in earnest they can do a great deal to restore the cordial relations with Publishers; and we shall be glad to see some such organization.

From Americus, Ga.—I am heartily in favor of the forming of an Association of Advertising Agents, as I believe it would be mutually profitable to both Advertising Agents and Publishers.

From Ashtabula, Ohio.—We favor the movement suggested in forming an Agents' Association.

PUBLISHERS AND AGENTS CAN WORK TOGETHER.

From Cleveland, Ohio.—The Agents' Association once established, how easily questions of moment to either party could be adjusted by the Executive of both organizations. How easily could both organizations work in each other's interest and for the interest of all concerned.

From Memphis, Tenn.—We hope that the discussion will lead to the adoption of measures for the protection of Advertising Agencies and of Publishers of old and established newspapers. We believe that the interests of the two are identical, and that beneficial results will follow any movement that will bring them into closer and more cordial relationship.

From Cincinnati, Ohio.—In the recent convention at Rochester, I offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That the object of this Association is not to antagonize in any way, any reliable Advertising Agencies, but we desire this Association and its members shall be thoroughly posted as to who are reliable Advertising Agents and who are worthy of credit.

From Burlington, Vt.—The writer has personally done some work in various ways looking to the clearing up of the business relations between Advertisers, Agents and Publishers, and he is glad to see the Agents taking hold of the matter.

THE VALUE OF THE BEST ADVERTISING AGENCIES.

From Memphis, Tenn.—The writer's experience has convinced him that the Advertising Agencies are his best friends, and he believes that all old and experienced Publishers will agree in this conclusion. It is fair to say, however, that the writer did not reach this opinion until some years after he had embarked in the newspaper business, and during that period he joined with other publishers in a full and unstinted denunciation of the agencies.

From Griffin, Ga.—I would prefer dealing through a responsible and satisfactory Agent to dealing with Advertiser direct, even at a less net price. A good Agent knows what newspaper business is, and what it is possible for a newspaper to do, and will protect the paper as well as his patron; and he is likely to be more prompt and business-like than the generality of even the most solvent Advertisers. If all foreign business could come through a few responsible agencies, the business of a newspaper manager could be much simplified.

From Memphis, Tenn.—Old Publishers will agree with us when we say that business taken from the good old Agents at a discount, pays more than the same amount taken by the Publishers direct from the Advertisers at full rates.

MAKE USE OF THEIR AGENTS.

I think if all Publishers would refer their Eastern business to their New York Agents, as New York is headquarters for Advertising Agencies, and Western business in like way to Chicago or St. Louis, it would be better all around.

From St. Paul, Minn.—We certainly believe that it is the right policy for us to protect Agents every time; we always do it.

From Meadville, Pa.—It would be our policy to refer to all parties not satisfied with our general rates to these selected agencies.

A FEW BETTER THAN TOO MANY.

From Rochester, N. Y.—So far as this office is concerned, we would be very greatly pleased if some sort of arrangement could be made by which we would not recognize or do business with more than six agencies which we well know, and at the same time have our interests properly looked after.

From St. Louis, Mo.—We do business with thirty or forty Advertising Agents in the United States. We look upon only six or seven as being prompt in their payments, fair in their measurements, and entirely free from trickery.

From Wapakoneta, Ohio.—Individually, although we receive considerable business from small Agents in the aggregate, I am decidedly in favor of an Association recommended by the Publishers' Association.

From Burlington, Vt.—We have on our books the names of twenty-seven Advertising Agents. Of this number we can only think of six whom we would care especially to do business with.

From Wilmington, Del.—Will accept business only from legitimate and responsible Agents (less than a dozen, all told).

From Nebraska City, Neb.—We had much rather do business with only two or three Agents who we know are good, than a dozen uncertain ones.

● THE DANGER OF MULTIPLYING AGENCIES.

From Indianapolis, Ind.—It is a great mistake Publishers make giving aid and comfort to so many commercially irresponsible agencies. Their impetuosity drives them to slashing and demoralizing methods, and in the long run they do more harm to the press than good, by far. If by declining to accept business at all from such, a Publisher should temporarily lose a few hundred, within a year or two at most the advance to solid ground and restoration of confidence in settled prices and methods would gain him far more than such loss. (I heartily wish there were not more than half a dozen agencies, and would quickly join any concerted movement of respectable Publishers to bring about that limit by absolutely declining the orders of all others.)

From Memphis, Tenn.—In the past two or three years an immense number of so-called agencies have sprung up. Inquiries through the commercial agencies uniformly show that the managers of the so-called Advertising Agencies are men without capital. These men obtain control of good lines of business and Publishers feel compelled, in spite of their better judgment, to open an account with them. If the movement continues, Publishers will, in the course of time, lose the advantage they now possess, in having the agencies guarantee payment, and will gain nothing in compensation.

From Memphis, Tenn.—The danger threatening the Advertising business does not lie in opposition to agencies, nor in the tendency among Publishers to give net rates to Advertisers, so much as in the institution of the great number of so-called Advertising Agencies who compete with old and established houses for business.

From Babylon, N. Y.—There are too many agencies, when they are allowed as now to bid against each other for advertising.

COMMENDATIONS OF GEO. P. ROWELL & CO.

From Camden, N. J.—We regard your agency as the best managed in the United States. We don't do business with anybody or any agency that equals your promptness in paying bills. It is safe to wager on check within forty-eight hours after bill is mailed, and it would be absurd to urge that this feature was not entitled to highest consideration, where so many are thieves, and while some of the most honorable are criminally slow in paying. Orders for advertising are also simple. A glance gives the proposition. The business received is also of better character than the average, and the work usually asked about is not so abominably difficult to do according to contract, and there is not usually much, I may say never, any petty correspondence about petty matters. In other words, there is more business to the square inch in your dealings with us than we receive from any other agency.

From Belleville, Ill.—Business coming through your agency is secured without wrangling correspondence—with fewer complicating conditions as to position, etc.,—in as great if not greater quantity—than from any other agency. Bills paid promptly in cash—nothing else even tendered. Have dealings with other agencies of many excellent virtues, but you manage to have as many and one or two more.

From Bristol, Pa.—While the average yearly income resulting from my transactions with your firm have not been large, yet it gives me pleasure to say that never during that long period (10 years) has there been a single exception to the prompt and satisfactory fulfillment of all contracts made by your firm.

From Charlottesville, Va.—Your agency stands first in this office. You have given me more advertising with less trouble and correspondence than any other agency with whom I deal.

From Bowling Green, Ky.—Geo. P. Rowell & Co. I regard as the head of the list, except probably in liberality.

From New Haven, Conn.—Your manner of doing business should entitle you to better rates than most advertising agencies.

From Putnam, Ct.—Without any flattery, the Geo. P. Rowell Agency is the most business-like, systematic and prompt.

CONCLUSIONS ARRIVED AT.

From Greensburg, Pa.—It has been the privilege of country newspapers to learn the standing of Advertising Agencies by a term in the school of direct experience. The lesson has been so expensive a one that the temptation is great to make a sweeping condemnation of the entire Advertising Agency fraternity. To avoid being unjust, will you not aid us in determining which are the "goats" and which are the "sheep" in your business. In other words, we would like very much to obtain a list of the sound, reliable Advertising Agencies in the United States. We have now on our table at least half a dozen propositions from as many different parties asking for space. If they are reliable we want their business. If they are not, we don't want it. The Convention recently held in Rochester, in which you took a prominent part, as I understand it, or rather a live interest, though possibly not a direct one, had for its object the compilation of a list of reliable agencies. Has that list been published or been made known?

We have always contended that the sharp competition between Agencies, caused by an unhealthy multiplicity of them, has been the cause of "low rates" and "bad accounts." We agree with you that a few good agencies in the United States and a carefully selected list of papers in each State, would be an advantage to Advertisers, Agencies and to the newspapers, and it will give us pleasure in aiding any movement that has for its object the weeding out of the fellows who "bust" to-day and "become corporations" to-morrow.

From Decorah, Iowa.—If there could be an agency that would really be an agency for the newspaper, it would become the inflexible duty of Publishers to stand by them.

From Moncton, N. B.—It seems to me the discussion you have commenced might be continued, and result in a fair understanding to all concerned.

EXPLANATIONS.

 These geographical indicators, which are placed immediately after the names of the counties, designate the relative position of the counties in their respective States, Territories or Provinces, the centre of each being used as a basis. They were devised and copyrighted by Joseph M. Toner, M. D., of Washington, D. C., and are used by authority of a contract with him.

The population figures marked with a dagger † are from the census of 1880, all others are from more recent estimates by resident publishers or postmasters.

Publications known to be bought and circulated mainly by persons and firms advertising therein by means of descriptive articles in the reading columns; or devoted to the (almost) exclusive advertising of any particular person or firm, or the advertising of any certain idea; or established solely as advertising schemes; embracing a class with circulations very largely gratuitous; are termed "advertising sheets," and no circulation rating is given.

In cases in which no advertisements are taken for a publication, the circulation rating, being of no importance to advertisers, has been omitted ; and in its place are inserted the words : " does not insert advertisements."

From Publishers of Newspapers who furnish information upon which the circulation rating may be based, a memorandum is asked of the actual date and issues of each number of the paper for the preceding three months. Each publisher sending such a report is requested to make it as definite and exact, as to dates and figures, as he would require from a rival publisher, were a comparison, based upon the two reports, to be instituted between the two papers.

Small engravings of newspaper buildings on solid metal bodies, occupying space of one inch in length or width, and no more, subject to approval on inspection, are inserted with the description of the paper without any charge. The Crosscup & West Engraving Co., No. 702 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, are good parties to furnish the engravings required, and have made all, or nearly all, which now appear in the book.

The DIRECTORY is issued annually. The work upon its revision proceeds all the time. Advertisers, Publishers and the public are entreated to lend their aid by calling attention to its shortcomings. The book can never be made perfect, but no pains will be spared to sustain the position which it has attained in the good opinion of advertisers and publishers.

DETROIT, C. H., Wayne Co., □ 180,000 pop., and the great emporium of Michigan, on Detroit r., 18 m. from Lake Erie, having one of the finest harbors on the lakes. A city of great commercial importance, being connected by railroads with the principal points West, and by means of the lakes and railroads with the East, and points of trade and commerce throughout Canada and the region bordering on the Great Lakes. Several railroads have their termination at this point, and the lake marine that passes Detroit has a tonnage equal to the entire ocean marine of the United States. Immense quantities of grain, pork, wool and copper ore are shipped from here to Eastern markets. The manufactures are extensive and various; railroad cars, iron, boots and shoes, fine cut tobacco and segars are among the most important. The working and developing of the copper and iron mines of Michigan bordering on Lake Superior, has created an extensive trade with that region, and several lines of large steamers are actively engaged in the trade.
